I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.
Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.
Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.
Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.
LEN. M FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.
The Cuticura treatment, for the cure of Skin, scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the Great Skin Cures. Price of CUTICURA, small boxes, 50c.; large boxes, $1.00. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1.00 per bottle. CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA SHAVING SOAP, 15c.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER

A Never-Failing Cure for Burns, Scalds, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, etc.

After forty years of trial, Perry Davis' Pain Killer stands unrivaled. It is safe! It acts immediately! It never fails!

Editor of the St. John (N.B.) News, says: In flesh wounds, aches, pains, sores, etc., it is the most effectual remedy we know of. No family should be without a bottle of it for a single hour.

From the Cincinnati Dispatch: We have seen its magic effects, and know it to be a good article.

From I. S. Potter, U. S. Consul at Crefeld, Rhenish Prussia: After long years of use, I am satisfied it is positively efficient as a healing remedy for wounds, bruises, and sprains.

W. W. Sharper, Valdosta, Ga., says: It is a panacea for all bruises and burns.

From R. W. Adams, Saco, Me.: It gave me immediate relief.

R. Lewis says: In forty years' use it never has failed me.

W. W. Lum, Nicholville, N. Y., says: I use your PAIN KILLER frequently. It relieves pain and soreness, and heals wounds like magic.

J. W. Dee says: For scalds and burns it has no equal.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER is not a new untried remedy. For forty years it has been in constant use; and those who have used it the longest are its best friends. Its success is entirely because of its merit. Since the Pain Killer was first introduced, hundreds of new medicines have come and gone, while to-day this medicine is more extensively used and more highly valued than ever before. Every family should have a bottle ready for use. Much pain and heavy doctors' bills may often be saved by prompt application of the Pain Killer. Unlike most medicines, it is perfectly safe even in the hands of a child. Try it once thoroughly, and it will prove its value. Your druggist has it at 25c., 50c., and $1.00 per bottle.

WEARINESS.

O little feet! that such long years
Must wander on through hopes and fears,
Must ache and bleed beneath your load;
I, nearer to the wayside inn
Where toil shall cease and rest begin,
Am weary thinking of your road!

O little hands! that, weak or strong,
Have still to serve or rule so long,
Have still so long to give or ask;
I, who so much with book and pen
Have toiled among my fellow-men,
Am weary, thinking of your task.

O little hearts! that throb and beat
With such impatient, feverish heat,
Such limitless and strong desires;
Mine that so long has glowed and burned,
With passions into ashes turned
Now covers and conceals its fires.

O little souls! as pure and white
And crystalline as rays of light
Direct from heaven, their source divine;
Refracted through the mist of years,
How red my setting sun appears,
How lurid looks this soul of mine!

Longfellow.

SELECT STORY.

BIBBS.

There was no doubt about it: John Weare was perfectly wretched that night. He had quarrelled with Jennie Bell, and he wasn't going to make it up. The fact was, she gave herself too many airs, and he didn't mean to stand it any longer. He didn't care if she was pretty; that was no reason why she should let half a dozen fellows at a time hang about the shop, or stroll in one at a time, and, leaning on their elbows, chatter and smirk and smile over the counter; cadets and officers, too—wild young fellows, who only did so for their own amusement, and would no more think of marrying her than they would inviting her to a ball that was coming off next month. To be sure, he was only a common cavalry soldier, but then he had been in the service a good many years now, had an excellent character, and a good trade at his back. His father had died long since, and there was a cottage already for Jennie to walk into, and they might settle down at once, if she'd only be sensible. Jennie acted as shop woman for her sister, Mrs. Evans. A very poor little shop it was—very small and badly stocked—for Mrs. Evans had only managed to get a few pounds worth of things with what had been subscribed for her at the garrison after the fever had carried off her husband. The speculation answered pretty well at first, for many of the officers' wives, knowing what an industrious woman Mrs. Evans was made a point of buying their tapes and cotton and sticks of sealing wax of her. Then Jennie's pretty little face was seen behind the counter, and the shop was filled from morning until night with officers and frisky young cadets, and the original customers took flight—though Mrs. Evans did not know it, believing the business was safe in the keeping of Jennie, and worked hard at dressmaking (she had three children to support, and the shop alone would not do it).

The officers were not profitable customers, for they only went to flirt with Jennie under the excuse of buying a penny paper, or perhaps asking for a time-table.

Jenny made the most trim and pretty and obliging of shop women, and the place itself was always a pattern of neatness; but the officers' wives did not care to go and buy thread where they were evidently interrupting a flirtation, and so the business continued to fall off, and Mrs. Evans began to get quite unhappy about it. Jennie—pretty, kind-hearted, thoughtless Jennie—had no idea that she had anything to do with it, or she would have sent every one of her admirers off at a pace that would have astonished them. She had been only too delighted, after her brother-in-law died, to come from Devonshire and live with her sister at Woolwich; not only because she was very fond of her sister, but also because she had wished many times to see John Weare again. She had made his acquaintance when her brother and he—for they had been in the same regiment—were stationed at Plymouth, and she had paid them a flying visit with her father. John had told her that he was tired of the service and wished to settle down, and inwardly thought that he could do no better than to ask her to settle with him. He had been very attentive when she came to Woolwich, and gradually established himself on the footing of a lover, till he found the shop always filled with the officers and cadets. At first he was shy of appearing before his superiors, then he got jealous and at last angry, for he felt and knew that they meant her no good, and besides it was doing real injury to the business of the shop. At last he spoke his mind and told the coquettish Jennie what he thought, and was snubbed for his pains.

"If you think I don't know how to take care of myself, Mr. Weare, you are very much mistaken, and I don't want any one to tell me what's right or wrong. I know for myself."

"Well, Miss Jennie, I didn't mean to give any offense. I only told you what I thought."

"Then you might have kept your thoughts to yourself," she said, with a little toss of her pretty head—"unless they had been nice ones" she added. He heard the aside and picked up his courage.

"It's awfully hard, too, when one that really cares can't get near you," he replied. Just then Jennie caught sight of Captain McGee, a tall and handsome man, with long whiskers and a red nose, coming in the direction of the shop, with a big bunch of flowers in his hand. She had heard John Weare's last words, but she was secretly of the opinion that "he ought to have come up to the scratch before," so she thought that a little jealousy might do him good.

"Oh, here comes Captain McGee," she said, in a delightful tone.

"Well, he's just the biggest blackleg in the service, Jennie, and if you take my advice you'll send him off sharp."

"I believe you are jealous, Mr. Weare, and telling me stories about the captain; he is always very polite to me," and she smoothed her pretty hair and arranged the trifles on the counter.

"Oh, he's polite enough, no doubt."

"And he's bringing me some flowers."

"Now look here, Jennie, are you going to take them?"

"Of course I am."

"Well, then, good-bye."

"Good-bye," she laughed. Of course she knew he wouldn't go.

"Jennie, he'll be in directly, and I shall be off, but you must choose between him and me. If you are going to keep on talking to him, I shall never come in the place again, so which is it to be?"

"The captain."

"But I am not joking: I'll never see you again."

"No more am I joking, so good-bye."

"Good-bye"—and he went.

II.

He kept resolutely away for a whole month—never once went near the place. If Jennie wanted him she might send for or get her sister to invite him to tea, as she had done before. But John Weare was not sent for, neither was he invited to tea, and his spirits began to wax low.

"If she cared about me she'd have got in my way somewhw before this—trust a woman." he thought.

The idea of not being cared for was not cheerful. That night he strolled carelessly by the shop, but on the opposite side of the way. Nothing was to be seen of Jennie. He walked on in a brown study, then crossed over, and went deliberately by the shop, with only one eye, however, turned in its direction, but not a sign of Jennie.

"It's an awful pity—such a nice girl; and there's the cottage all ready for her to step into, and me ready to retire from the service, and a good trade at my back; it's too bad, all along of that Captain McGee; too. And the fruit in the garden (of the cottage) all ripe, and no one to pick it."

The very next morning John Weare walked deliberately into the shop and asked for a penny newspaper, and had the felicity of being served by Mrs. Evans.

"Quite a stranger, Mr. Weare," she said; but that was the only remark she made, and for the life of him he could not screw up his courage to ask for her sister.

That night John Weare was miserable.

"She can't care a rush for me," he thought, and marched all over the town and nearly to Greenwich and back in his excitement.

The next day was a lucky one for John. He came across Bibbs. Bibbs was Mrs. Evans' eldest boy. No one knew what his real name was, or why he was called Bibbs, but he was never called anything else.

"Bibbs," said John Weare, "come and have some fruit," and he carried him off in triumph to the cottage and stuffed him with gooseberries until he couldn't move, and with black currants till his mouth was as black as a crow. Then he carried him inside and stood him on the table and sat down before him.

"How old are you, Bibbs?"

He thought it better to begin the conversation with a question.

"Five and a half. Is that your sword up there?"

"Yes. Who gave you those bronze shoes, Bibbs?"

Now he knew Jennie had given them to him, but he so wanted to hear her name.

"Auntie. She's going away soon," he added: "Let me look at your sword now?"

"Where is she going to?" he asked in consternation.

"Devonshire. Do let me try on your sword?"

"Why is she going?" he asked, with a sick feeling in his heart.

"She's ill, I think, and she's always crying now; one day she was crying over that silver thing you gave her, and kissing it like everything."

The "silver thing" was a little heart of about the size of a shilling, which he had bought at Charlton Fair last October, and timidly asked her to accept.

John Weare jumped up and showed Bibbs his sword, and carried him on his back all over the place, and entreated him to have more black currants in his delight. But Bibbs declined.

"Aunt Jennie's going to bring me some from Eltham's to-night," he said.

So Jennie was going to Eltham, was she. John Weare took Bibbs home, and on his way presented him with a white woolly lamb that moved on wheels and squeaked, and a monkey that went up a stick on being gently pushed.

"Crying over her silver thing!" said John Weare. "I'll go and hang about the Eltham road till I see her and beg her pardon."

And he went, and Jennie met him and pouted and declared she hadn't once thought of him, and then broke down and cried. And John begged her pardon, and declared that he had been a heartless brute, and then Jennie contradicted him and said it was all her fault, and told him how Mrs. Dunlop, the Colonel's wife, had one day walked in and told her, in the kindliest possible manner, that she was spoiling her sister's business, for the ladies who had been interested in her welfare kept away because of Jennie's flirtation propensities, which filled up the shop with idle officers who were always in the way, and how she had been so ashamed and wretched and so cut up at the desertion of John Weare that she had intended to go back to Devonshire.

"But you won't now?" he said, as they leaned over the stile leading to the Eltham fields. "You'll get ready at once and we'll be married as soon as possible, before the fruit in the garden is spoilt?"

It took a long time to talk her into it (about three-quarters of an hour), but then she was very happy at heart, and chattered like a young magpi, and told John how she had snubbed Captain McGee, and had thrown all his flowers out of the window.

"And it really was all through that dear Bibbs that you waylaid me to-night?" she asked.

"Certainly."

"Why, but for him I might never have seen you again?"

"Perhaps not."

"I'll give Bibbs a regular hug when I get home," she thought. And she did; and the day before she was married she bought him a rocking horse, which he delights in to this day.

The Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court room is the one spot in the Capitol in which the stranger tarrying within our gates does not intrude; if the stranger were not guided to it, he would never find it, standing, as it does, in the darkest niche of the marble corrider leading from the rotunda of the Senate Chamber. If the stranger can be induced to sit awhile and content himself, he will learn much that is curious. Nine men, grave and reverend, each one looking as though he had passed the line of time which separates one's old age from his prime, sit before him in quiet dignity. The black silken robes in which they are clad gives them the appearance of ministers of the extremely high church, while the little books they hold in their hands, with pencils in suspense, seem to belie the first impression, and raise in fancy picture of the race-track and betting book. An inspection of the books, however, proves them to be the record of the case on hearing, which a dapper little man, in language as dry as the cobwebs on his office walls, is arguing. He speaks in a monotone, and the gathered wisdom of centuries is rolled into his brief. No buncome oratory, no flashes of wit, no pathetic touches which sadden in the nisi prius Court and float a jury's verdict on a stream of tears, characterize the dapper little lawyer's speech, for he is beginning where all feeling ended—hard, dry reason is the only weapon in his armory. The case itself may be a curiosity; whatever the decision in it may be, it will be perpetuated in the reports and through time to come other lawyers will learn it and quote it glibly. Into this Court of last resort it has come only after long years of waiting. Mayhap children were born into it, inheriting it as a legacy, and, growing into manhood, pinned their existence to it in hope, or groaning under the disappointment it caused them, blew their brains out to escape the poverty it entailed; people may have married into it, grown old and died natural deaths in it; romance and reality, love and hate, joy ond sorrow, may have jumbled clashingly together in it, but the record, it will never tell you of these things; for the record alone contains the legal facts in it. Certain it is, that it has come from thousands of miles away; and just as truly, has it been the case of the butterfly by the child, or the hunt for the bushel of gold at the foot of the rainbow. When one quotes the saying of some learned Judge—the older the better—and applies the principle it contains to a certain fact, one is called a lawyer; when one looks behind the title, John Doe vs. Richard Roeh to analyze the feelings, the joys and heartaches enlivening and crushing those who will be enriched or beggared in the result of the principles, one is called—a poet. "It's good in its way," says Greenbag and Parchment, after reading Hamlet, but it is not the law." "It is sad the men died by the negligence of a fellow workman; but then their death, though melancholy, has settled the law," says the learned Judge.

So the dapper little lawyer, oblivious of everything save his books and his reason, continues in monotone his legal jargon. So the Judges in silken robes, with books and pencils, listens as intently as a child to a fairy tale by the fireside, and so the auditors slip noiselessly out to gaze upon the pictures in the rotunda or to look upon Maryland and Virginia from the dome. If the stranger, however, still lingers, and if he will count in the row of Judges from either end his eye will rest upon the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court is to hold the highest office in the country. Members and Senators wield their powers and distribute their patronage only for a few brief years at best; the popular breath which makes them also decrees their change. The president himself descends from his lofty position to mingle among the people, with only the simple prefix "Mr." placed before his name, but the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of United States of America is Chief Justice for life, regardless of popular changes and chances; nay, in death, history will always speak of him as the Chief Justice. He represents human ambition satisfied; he is Alexander without that monarch's grief; his is the triumph of the Roman General.

Around the semi-circular walls with their dead faces cut in marble, watching the proceedings to-day, the stranger may count the Chief Justices who have been since the Republic began, and the number including the present incumbent, will only reach the figure 6. Only six Chief Justices in ninety-three years! The stranger believes longevity is one of the benefits of the position. Many wrecks of Empire have been thrown upon the shores of time in ninety-three years; wars and pestilence have depopulated and laid waste; American liberties have been more than once threatened, and in the midst of all only six Chief Justices in turn have presided over the deliberations of Justice.

Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Ralph Waldo Eemerson, the celebrated American poet, essayist and philosopher, died in Boston, April 27th. He was born in Boston 1803 and graduated at Harvard college in 1821. Having turned his attention to theology he was ordained minister of the Second Unitarian church of Boston, but soon after formed peculiar views in regard to forms of worship, abandoned his profession and retiring to the quiet village of Concord devoted himself to his favorite study—the nature of man and his relation to the universe. In 1838 Mr. Emerson published Literary Ethics, an Oration, and in the following year Nature, an Essay. In 1841 he published The Method of Nature, Man the Reformer, several lectures and the first series of his Essays, the second series of which did not appear until 1844. In 1846 he published a volume of poems. Two years later he traveled in England where he delivered lectures on the Mind and Manners of the Nineteenth Century, and in 1849 delivered the series entitled Representative Men. In connection with Mr. W. H. Channing, he published, in 1852, the Memoir of Margaret Fuller, Marchioness d'Ossoli. English Traits and the Conduct of Life were both published in 1860. Mr. Emerson delivered at Concord, in 1861, an oration on the death of President Lincoln and in 1866 received the degree of LL. D. from Harvard college. Much of his literary work has been done in contributing to periodicals. His last article of this character appeared in the Century Magazine for March the subject being the "Superlative." Some of Emerson's works have been translated into French and have excited much admiration among Parisian transcendentalists. He was unquestionably the most eminent modern philosopher of the Pantheistic school and one of the most remarkable personifications of American genius.

A Reversible Joke.

HOW A HUSBAND PUNISHED HIS WIFE FOR A "MAKE-BELIEVE ELOPEMENT.

A Burlington man recently wedded a young wife. The lady became enthused over Will Carleton's tale of the elopement of a handsome young woman with a "handsomer man," and determined to try the same thing herself. She wrote a neat little note, stating that she had left home with a gentleman whom she had dearly loved before she had met her husband, and that he need not trouble himself to look for them. Then she called in her younger brother and went calling with him, arranging to return and hide where she could witness her liege lord's dismay when he came to read of her flight. She, from her place of concealment, saw him enter, saw him look all around in surprise at her absence, and finally saw him discover the note. He opened and read it, while her heart beat high with excitement in anticipation of the breaking out she expected to hear.

The poor fellow finished the cruel missive, tore it up and threw the fragments on the floor, and then, without a moment's warning, drew a revolver and fired point-blank at his breast, and fell without a sign of life to the carpet. With a terrified scream the woman was at her husband's side in a moment, lifting him, shaking him, turning him, and hunting for blood, all the time shrieking to her William to speak to her, to forgive her, to only look at her. William lay motionless, however, and the neighborhood, aroused by the shot and screams, came flocking in to learn of the excitement, when suddenly, when a score or more had gathered, the dead leaped up from the floor as well as ever, at which the wife fainted away. She soon revived, however, and then it all came out that the younger brother, being in sympathy with William, had let him into the scheme, and he had chosen that mode of punishing his joking wife. She jokes no more, but her husband has compromised on a pony phaeton to keep peace in the family.—[Burlington Hawkeye.

Speaking A Piece.

HOW JOHNNY TOLD ABOUT MARY'S LITTLE LAMB.

The other evening there was a little company, and during the entertainment the hostess dragged her little boy to the front to "speak a piece."

"Come, Johnny, like a good boy, and speak 'Mary's Little Lamb' for the ladies and gentlemen,"

Johnny knew that there was remuneration in the background, and the preliminaries having been arranged in an undertone, she slicked his hair and he commenced:

"Mary had a little fleece,
Its snow was white as wool,
And every time that Mary lambed
That fleece would go to school."

"Now, now Johnny!" said his mother, "you know that isn't right. Say it just as you did this afternoon and I'll"—here she broke into a maternal whisper, and the boy commenced again:

Mary had a little lamb,
Whose white was snow as fleece,
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb would go apiece."

"Johnny, Johnny!" cried the mother, "that isn't right. Speak it right this time. The ladies and gentlemen never heard it. Now, go on!" Once more the little fraud went at:

"Mary had a little snow,
It's fleece was lined with white,
And everywhere the lamb would go,
Mary was sure to bite."

"What a naughty boy!" exclaimed the proud mother, who had been training the child all the afternoon for this display. "Now, speak it right or mamma won't kiss you when you go to bed." Thus prepared, the boy perpetrated himself once more:

"Mary had a little wool,
It's fleece was lined with snow,
And every one that Mary fleeced
The white was sure to show."

"I'm ashamed of you, Johnny, that you don't speak it right! You must do it this time or mamma will punish you."

"I won't!" bawled the urchin.

But his mother promised him some additional candies or buns, or something that had the social advantage of lying heavily on his stomach, and the little wretch began:

"Mary had a little school,
It's snow was fleece as lamb,
And everywhere that Mary went
You'd surely find that ram."

Then the guests very properly interfered, and said it was a shame to torment the sweet child. He had done nobly, and should have his pay right off. He had the candies and the buns, and his mother packed him off to bed, while the company found solace in the reflection that before morning he would probably be crying with the stomach-ache and writhing unto the night-mare.

John Cronin committed suicide at Paris, Ky. His body was denied burial in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, in accordance with the law of that Church. The Cronins owned a lot, and in the night they surreptitiously made the interment. Father Barry, the pastor, telegraphed to his Bishop for instructions, and was ordered to exhume the remains, which was done.

THE COLUMBIAN.

G. E. ELWELL, J. K. BITTENBENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, MAY 5th, 1882.

Hon. C. R. Buckalew will be a candidate for nomination for Congress before the Democratic Convention of this county. We are pleased to make this anouncement, as Mr. Buckalew's well known ability and his long experience in national legislation render him the fittest candidate that could be presented. We suggested his name some time since, but he has only recently consented to enter the field.

Hon. J. P. Wickersham, for many years the Superintendent of Public Instruction in this State, has been appointed charge d' affairs at Copenhagen, Denmark. It is a position with a salary of $5,000 attached.

A law of the United States revised statutes will make it lively for any one who fancies he can fill up the holes in a punched coin for the purpose of passing it off on his unsuspecting neighbor. The penalty is $3,000 or imprisonment for five years, at the discretion of the Court, or both.

Judge Belford who has been selected by the Israelites of the United States had an interview with President Arthur last week in reference to the prosecution of the Jews in Russia. The President gave Judge Belford all the encouragement that he could; that he would endeavor, with strict regard to courtesy, to gain for them a measure of freedom and protection.

W. M. Breslin, editor of the Lebanon Advertiser has been mentioned by quite a number of the leading journals of the State as a Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-large. He is a life long Democrat and his devotion to the party has been untiring. Those who have the pleasure of his acquaintance say that he is able, faithful, and thoroughly honest, and would make an excellent Congressman. We would support him with great pleasure.

An Anti-Chinese Convention was held in San Francisco, Cal, on Friday last and adopted a plan of action which includes a scheme to divide the Pacific coast into districts which shall be notified to remove the Chinese within a specified time. Failing such action, the district is to be proclaimed dangerous, and peaceably disposed citizens to be warned to abandon it, and if the Chinese are still harbored in the district the league is to remove them by force—using as little force as may be necessary, until the country is rid of them.

The Malley boys are on trial at New Haven, Connecticut, with Blanche Douglass, for the murder of a young woman named Jennie Cramer. She was seen in company with the accused, and was soon afterwards found dead in the water. The prosecution are trying to show that criminal intimacy existed between the victim and the boys, and that the girl, Douglass, was a party to it. That after their purpose had been accomplished the girl was first poisoned and thrown into the water after her death. The defense will attempt an alibi, and undertake to show that the presence of arsenic in the body is accounted for by the fact that the girl was in the habit of taking it for her complexion and that she committed suicide by drowning herself. The trial will be a long one.

Dr. Lamson was executed in London on the morning of April 28th., for the murder of his brother-in-law, Percy M. John. Lamson was an American but had spent much of his life in Paris. He poisoned his victim, who was a student at an English school, by administering aconite. The victim was the heir to a large sum of money and Dr. Lamson desired to put him out of the way in order to get possession of the funds. Lamson had the reputation of being insane and several of his near American relatives were also insane. Americans endeavored to show cause why Lamson should not be hanged, but the evidence of insanity submitted to the English government was not favorably received. Dr. Lamson was born in America and at one time practised medicine in Lancaster, Pa.

THE NATIONAL BANKS.

The charters of 392 National Banks will expire before the end of next February and among the pseudo financiers in Congress it is feared there are some who will pertinaciously oppose the renewal of these charters. Banks are a commercial necessity and if they are compelled to withdraw their circulation and close up their affairs it would subject the business interests of the country to serious embarrassment, and might possibly result in a disastrous panic. According to their recent reports these banks have loaned $150,000,000 to business men, they have outstanding $68,000,000 in notes, all of which would have to be called in during the next six months. On this subject the Harrisburg Patriot says: "If their charters are not renewed these banks will be obliged to call in their loans in order to be able to deposit a sufficient sum with the government in greenbacks to redeem their outstanding notes. They will begin to call in their loans early in the coming fall, if Congress should fail to provide for their recharter. The distress to business which would be caused by so sudden a withdrawal of their loans is incalculable. Certain and inevitable bankruptcy will follow so disastrous a blow to the borrowing class. Congress can avoid the threatened calamity by prompt and decided action."

A Widow's Rights

In the opinion filed by Judge Trunkey, of the Supreme Court, in the case of Daniel Rupp, of Lehigh county, who had obtained a verdict against the Lehigh Iron Company for the killing of his son, who was nineteen years old. The boy was married. His wife effected a compromise with the company and received a compensation for her husband's death. Mr. Rupp brought suit for the loss of his son and the services of the latter, which he was entitled to during the rest of his minority. An appeal was taken from the verdict, which was in his favor. Justice Trunkey in his opinion says that the circumstances of the young man, who lived apart from his parents and did not contribute to their support, were such that they suffered no pecuniary loss. The statute prefers a widow, and where a minor leaves a wife or children his parents have no right. The first person entitled to such damages is the wife or husband; next the children if any, and lastly the parents.

LUZERNE REPUBLICANS.

It seems that Mr. Orr and Congressman Scranton were unable to deliver the goods promised Cameron, in Luzerne county. In consideration of the Wilkesbarre post office they were to see that machine delegates were sent to the Republican State Convention. The senatorial conferees met at Wilkes-Barre last week, and these are among the resolutions adopted:

Be it resolved, that it is the unanimous sentiment of the Republicans of the 21st Senatorial District that the nomination of Beaver, Rawle and a whole State ticket according to a programme determined upon long prior to the meetings of the convention, without popular canvass or party expression as to the fitness or availableness of the selected, would be not only impolitic, but a positiye insult to the inteligence of the Republican voters of Pennsylvania.

That we condemn the unit-rule methods and selfish political actions of Senator J. D. Cameron as unrepublican, unpatriotic, oppressive, and subversive of the best interests of the party.

That we commend the conduct of Senator Mitchell in his efforts to restore wise counsels and united, harmonious action to the conduct of party affairs.

That leadership and not dictatorship is essential to party success and supremacy.

That we hereby instruct the delegates from this district to so act at the convention as to express our reprobation of the arrogance which has attempted to turn our State Convention from a representative, consulting body into a mere machine.

So called independent Republicans are talking after this fashion every where, but every man of them will turn in and support the State ticket just as Cameron makes it. See if they don't.

STALWARTS AND INDEPENDENTS.

The two branches of the Republican party, Stalwarts and Independents, each side represented by a committee of five, met at the Continental Hotel in Philadelphia on Saturday and Monday last, for the purpose of effecting a compromise and adjustment of their difficulties, if possible. The Independents, headed by Charles S. Wolf, demanded the withdrawal of General Beaver's name as candidate for Governor, because he is the machine candidate. The only thing done by the conference was the adoption of a lot of resolutions to which nobody will pay any attention. The Harrisburg Patriot says: Two things may be learned from the result of the Independent-Stalwart conference in Philadelphia: 1. That the Stalwart leaders are unwilling to resign their control of the political power of the State on any consideration; 2. That the Independents made a blunder in conferring with the politicians whose overthrow is their professed purpose. The platform of principles recommended to the Stalwart State convention by the joint conference consists of the merest glittering generalities which any political convention might adopt as a bait for unwary voters. If the Stalwart body which will assemble in this city on the tenth inst., should accept this platform, as it probably will, few people will be deceived by the transparent device. It will not be the first time that wolves have appeared in sheep's clothing, or that a Republican convention has kept the word of promise to the ear to break it to the hope. Why, if Cameron, Quay and company deemed it expedient to incorporate the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer and the Sermon on the Mount in their platform they would not hesitate a moment. They would do it with as pious an air as that of a gambler at a funeral or a bawd at a christening. Platform forsooth! They would

"Resolve and re-resolve and die the same."

But even if the stalwart leaders would live up to the pledges they are so ready to make they would find means to defeat the reforms which the independents profess to seek. Their creatures occupy the offices and cannot be removed. Their lieutenants control the local organizations through the influence of official position and cannot be dislodged from power. The machinery of the county conventions would therefore be run in their interest with but little less jar than that of the present system of electing State delegates by county committees. Philadelphia, for instance, held a convention last year, but the voice of the Independents was unheard. It was smothered by Gas Trust and other official influences. The pledge that delegates to State conventions shall be elected in the manner in which candidates for seats in the Legislature are chosen will not help the Independents a whit, as the history of Legislative nominations clearly proves. There has not been a time during the whole existence of the Republican organization in this State when the Cameron influence could not dictate a large majority of its candidates for seats in the Legislature. Even when Thaddeus Stephens and Governor Curtin united their forces in opposition to Cameron the latter was victorious. How idle and foolish it is, therefore, to hope for the defeat of Cameron in the election of delegates upon this Legislative plan now that he has supreme control of the machinery of the party!

The Independents blundered in conferring at all with the elements they denounce as corrupt and unworthy of public confidence. They descended to the level of the machine politician when they consented to parley with him. They blundered in failing to break off all negotiations upon the refusal of the Stalwarts to take down their slate and agree to a convention to be chosen by the people. They blundered in assenting to a platform which the Stalwarts will claim binds the parties endorsing it to a support of the Stalwart ticket. Nevertheless the Independents may recover their former position if at their approaching State convention they declare against the Stalwart candidates on the ground that their selection was made by methods opposed to the system and principles endorsed by the conference. That loop-hole of escape is left them. It is true, too, that only the position and influences of those Independents who participated personally in the conference are effected by their unfortunate mistakes. The body of the following is unharmed by the efforts of their blunders. The war against the bosses will be prosecuted with greater vigor than before and if the old leaders fail the occasion will produce others who will profit by the experience of those who have fallen in the fray.

Longfellow's Will.

Judge Brooks gave a decision at Cambridge which materially effects several bequests of the will of Henry W. Longfellow. The decision is that erasures which occur are to be considered no part of the will, also that the interlineations are of no effect. This deprives each of the children of the testator's brother of a legacy of $1,000 and makes void the legacy of $50,000 to his brother Stephen. The decision is based upon the ground that a will cannot be altered except by a codicil. The will was admitted to probate.

The shooting case from Centralia was tried on Wednesday. The facts as proven were that John Lenehan and Pat Murphy, two young men of Centralia were together on the night of September 17th 1881. They walked home, passing several persons on the way. When they reached some shanties Murphy had some conversation with some one through an open doorway, and immediately afterward Lenehan who was walking ahead was shot in the back, the ball coming out of the breast. Murphy helped him home and called in a doctor. All the circumstances seemed to point to an accidental shooting, and the jury therefore acquitted the defendant.

Mr. Ezekiel Cole is making arrangements to finish his new house. When completed he will have the most commodious house in central Jackson.

As the correspondent of the Republican from Jackson who signs his name "Pilgrim" took exceptions to a word I used in the issue of the COLUMBIAN of March 31st. I will let the defense of that article explain itself, but would say this in addition viz., before this young man or whoever he is sets himself up as a critic, he had better criticise his own orthography, for if anyone will refer to his different articles of recent dates they will find at least twelve words spelled wrong, or else they are typographical errors, and I can furnish the necessary proof if this assertion is denied. So he had better study the spelling book well himself before writing for a Journal, or else sign his name Josh Billings or Artemus Ward.

Concerning my use of the word "clerical" I have only to say that a reference to any dictionary will show that it was perfectly correct, while "Pilgrim" by attempting to display his knowledge of English has succeeded only in exposing his ignorance.

A man's reputation like his coat may be soiled without touching the man himself. Since the reputation is not the character anymore than the sleeve is the arm it envelops, the character can be soiled only by what the man himself does. While the reputation may have mud thrown upon it by any one unmanly enough to want to injure the standing of another. We are to see that our motives are firm, our principles honorable and our outward life governed by them, and to go about our duty calmly, confident that in the end they who unjustly seek to injure us will do us no harm.

MORE ANON.

The Soldiers' Orphans.

LETTER FROM DR. HIGBEE ON THE SUBJECT.

The following letter has been addressed by the Superintendent of the Soldiers' Orphans Schools to the G. A. R. committee that waited upon him in reference to the deprivation of children of the privileges of these schools: "Your resolution, earnestly urged upon the attention of the superintendent of the public instruction, has been most carefully considered. We feel with you the painful fact that there are many destitute children of disabled soldiers, whose applications for admission to the Soldiers' Orphan Schools of the commonwealth have been received, examined and approved, who cannot be ordered into said schools because the funds appropriated to this end by the Legislature have been exhausted. From earnest and charitable impulses, which we commend, you urge us to order all such children into the schools upon the pledge of indorsement and support upon the part of the large and widely influential organization which you represent. Only one answer can be given to this urgent request upon your part, which is this: While individually we would be most glad to grant your request, yet as representing a department of the Commonwealth we have no power to do so. We cannot contract debts, by going beyond specific legislative appropriations, upon any authority other than that of an act of the Legislature itself."

Council Proceedings.

The regular monthly meeting of Council was held May 3d at the council room, all members present. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. Dr. J. R. Evans presented a bill for medical services rendered to small pox patients by direction of the Board of Health. A committee from the Winona Fire Co. asked the council to take some steps towards obtaining a reducer so that all the hose of the fire department can be connected in case of fire. A committee of the Rescue H. & L Co. asked that their large hook and pole be repaired, and stiff nozzles be purchased. On motion a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Hartman, Rabb and Moyer was appointed to look after fire apparatus, to whom these matters were referred. Henry S. Phillips called the attention of council to the opening of a street from Rock street to Lightstreet road. J. C. Sterner inquired what the council proposed to do with pavements on Catharine street. On motion a committee of two was appointed to ascertain what land owners were willing to do toward opening street from Rock to Lightstreet road. Chair appointed Messrs. Waller and Hartman as such committee. On motion the street commissioner was ordered to fill up West street below Fifth, so as to make it passable for teams. On motion it was ordered that Jefferson street be opened from Main to Fifth as early as possible. The subject of the pavement on Catharine street was discussed, but no definite action taken. After ordering several bills paid, council adjourned to meet on Saturday evening next.

From Stillwater.

So far our town has had no occasion for a street sprinkler.

S. M. Bickford, a prominent lumber merchant of Lock Haven, paid the writer a short visit last week, upon which occasion we retired to a certain place which shall be nameless, and in the space of about two hours succeeded in capturing thirty odd large speckled beauties. We will mail a recipe of the composition (?) which we use in our bait to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of two three cent postage stamps.

Mr. Gaylord McHenry of Eyer's Grove, and Miss Mary Kisner of Millville, were in attendance at the Christian Church on Lord's day. H. C. Cooper, the boy preacher, delivered an able and eloquent sermon on the "Products of Faith." He is now stopping with the writer and is studying theology together with the piscatorial art.

Elder C. S. Long of Lock Haven spent several days visiting his mother at Rhorsburg, and is superintending some repairs on his farm near here.

Lovers of that exquisite and early flower, the Trailing Arbutus, should come this way. The writer of the item in last week's COLUMBIAN which set forth the fact that the lovers of the flower had been unsuccessful in their researches this season, should accompany them.

The school at Stillwater opened on Monday under the tutorship of Mr. McMichaels of Fishing Creek.

Mr. Isaiah Raber has erected a stable on his lot.

Moses McHenry was in the city last week buying his Spring stock of goods. J. F. McHenry will go and do likewise next week. The mercantile interests of our "little city" are flourishing under the efficient management of the above named gentlemen.

T. H. Edgar, proprietor of Stillwater planing mills is busily engaged in building a new dam.

Glad to see the COLUMBIAN call attention to the fish and game laws. Keep it before the people. If reports be true there are gross violations in some localities not far off.

"Pan Hoss."

MR. EDITOR.

In reply to the enquiry in your paper as to the spelling of the word "pan hoss," allow me to say that I have looked for that word in the German lexicon and have not been able to find any probable derivation of it, in that language. I think the word never crossed the ocean but is native born, of Indian origin. There is a word among the Indians adopted in our language sometimes spelled "pone" and sometimes "paune" in Webster's Dictionary signifying a cake made of corn meal. I believe the name of the mush of corn and buckwheat meal in the water in which the liver and clippings of pork are boiled is derived from the same word "paune" and that its proper spelling and pronunciation is accordingly "paunous."

Yours &c.
J. B. ROBISON.

HOW TO SET OUT TREES.—This is the season when our people are buying fruit, shade and ornamental trees, and very likely one-half of those transplanted will die through mismanagement. If a tree is carefully dug, with plenty of fine fibrous roots, safely packed, if they are to be shipped any distance, and carefully shielded from the sun and wind; after it is removed from the box or package, the roots dipped in a sort of paste made of soil and water, and if the ground is not in condition for immediate planting "heeled in" with care, so that the soil comes in contact with the roots, not one tree in fifty will die.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

A Sure Cure Found at Last!

No One Need Suffer!

A sure cure for blind, bleeding, itching and ulcerated piles has been discovered by Dr. William, (an Indian remedy,) called Dr. William's Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 or 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electuaries do more harm than good. William's Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed,) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles &c., and for nothing else.

Read what Hon. J. M. Coffinberry of Cleveland says about Dr. William's Indian Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave me such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. William's Indian Ointment.

For sale by all druggists or mailed on receipt of price, $1.00.

Exhaustion of soil.

BY J. B. LAWES, LL. D., ROTHAMSTED, ENGLAND.

Considerable fault has been found with me for saying that profitable agriculture is founded upon the exhaustion of the soil: if exhaustion is considered an unsuitable term, I do not object to change the word for reduction of its fertility. The prices of the various products of the farm are regulated chiefly by the labor expended on their production, and not upon the amount of soil ingredients which they remove from the land. If all nations agreed to pass a law compelling every farmer to restore to the land the whole of the ingredients which he removd by his crops, we should not only see such a law followed by a very general, and large rise in the price of our ordinary foods, but also that the relative cost of the foods themselves would be very much altered. Even without such a law we find that necessity, from time to time, compels farmers to alter their mode of cultivation, and cropping; thus, when they find the fertility of their land decreasing, they devote themselves to cultivating such products as contain more atmospheric and fewer soil constituents. For instance, let us take the case of sugar beet. If the roots are sold off the farm, in each 2,000 lbs. of the dry roots about 175 lbs. of soil products will be removed from the land; while by the conversion of the same amount of sugar beet into beef, or mutton, only about 10 lbs. of soil products will be removed; and if the beets is converted into sugar none of the soil products need be lost to the land.

For further illustrations, I will follow grass through the same series. If sold as hay, seven or eight per cent of the soil constituents are removed from the land; very much less, if the grass is converted into milk; still less if converted into butter: this last being a purely atmospherical product, all the soil constituents may find their way back to the land, except perhaps some small portion, which in the form of skim-milk, might be used to produce pork. It takes 5 or 6 lbs. of corn to produce 1 lb increase in a pig; a large per centage of this increase is fat, and a farmer who preserves the blood and offal, would exhaust very little of his soil products in producing bacon. It is the rich fatty cheese which commands the high price; and the low priced skim-milk cheese which is comparatively rich in soil products. The same law holds good with regard to flour; the finest flour is exceedingly poor, both in nitrogen and minerals, coarser flour contains more, and bran a still larger amount of the soil ingredients. As man cannot exist without a certain amount of these soil products in his food, and as all his efforts in the production of his food are directed towards getting rid of such soil products, the way in which he obtains them in a separate form becomes rather an interesting physiological question.—American Agriculturist for April.

To Grow the Lima Bean Successfully.

The Lima bean is one of our most popular and desirable vegetables; but for one reason or another many people have trouble in getting them to do well and some people in getting them at all. This bean loves heat, dislikes cold moisture, and delights in loose, rich soil. Those who wish to succeed have to be careful that all the conditions are fully insured. In order to guard against damp the earth is drawn into good seized hills, so that any superabundant moisture can pass rapidly away. If the soil be heavy a large portion of roadsand or even finely sifted coal ashes should be mixed with the soil in these hills, and if one can have access to a cow-yard, well decomposed manure from such a locality is the perfection of food to the Lima bean. Then in planting, they ought to be set but just beneath the surface, or they will be very liable to rot in pushing their way through. It does no harm either to push them in the ground edgewise, as the sprouting green comes up the sooner.

But with even all these precautions for dryness, food and warmth, people often plant too soon; a cold rain follows and the seed rots. Four sound looking beans are enough for each hill, and if all grow and do well one may be taken out. But as a very sure—we may say certain—guarntee against the seed rotting grease with tallow the beans before planting. We have in fact never failed in our own crop, in following out this method, unless through a prolonged drought like that of last year, and even then we had at least half a crop.

Look to the Fruit-Crop.

Now is the time to increase your apple, pear and peach oychards. The extent of ground required by these orchards is so small as scarcely to be missed in a moderate-seized farm, and will produce more profit for the land occupied than perhaps any other crop with which it could be substituted. Where your apples and pears are not of the most productive and paying varieties and the trees are not too large, grafting should be resorted to. Some whole trees that are in good health and vigorous growers may have nearly the entire top grafted with superior kinds; and this should be always done after it has been discovered the fruit is not true to name or fails to be productive. As to peaches, they are almost universally budded, and this is done most generally in June and July.

In gardens poisonous plants are declared by the Gardeners' Magazine to be a few in number, and of no great value for decorative purposes. A very large proportion of the flowers that are in highest repute for beauty, such as the rose, dahlia, pelargonium, begonia, wallflower, stock carnation and primma, are altogether harmless; although for the most part of no value whatever as articles of food. But as there are so many decorative plants that will not injure, even if eaten, it is easy to exclude from the garden a certain few that are noxious, and have sometimes been associated with sad fatalities. The rooting out of the great blue aconite or moonks-hood, the root of which contains a virulent poison, and has yet been many times severed on the table as horseradish, is therefore recommended.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, consumption, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Logansport, Ind. Dec. 1, 1880.

For a long time I have been a sufferer from stomach and kidney disease. My appetite was very poor and the very small amount I did eat disagreed with me. I was annoyed very much from non-retention of urine. I tried many remedies with no success, until I used Brown's Iron Bitters. Since I used that my stomach does not bother me any. My appetite is simply immense. My kidney trouble is no more, and my general health is such, that I feel like a new man. After the use of Brown's Iron Bitters for one month, I have gained twenty pounds in weight. O. B. SARGENT.

Leading physicians and clergymen use and recommend BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.
